- In the first paragraph (lines 1–3), we learn that ____.
 people are using self-driving cars everywhere people may be able to buy self-driving cars next year people must pass tests before driving self-driving cars people can watch movies in self-driving cars
- Explain why there is always someone in the driver's seat during the testing stage of a self-driving car.

- What is the main idea of paragraph 3 (lines 10–20)?
 which self-driving cars have sensors how self-driving cars were invented where self-driving cars are tested why self-driving cars are safe
- The text refers to a dog running into the road (line 18). This is a situation where ____.
 self-driving cars respond quickly the sensors hear the dog a person needs to drive the car the computer stops the sensors
- A self-driving car was tested on a wet night. It failed the test. Give a possible reason for this.

You have the same 15 gigabyte storage limit on the app as you do when accessing Google Drive through a browser on your computer. Google Docs can be used for word processing, Google Sheets for Excel-style spreadsheets and Google Slides for presentations. If you do have an account, a password reset message will be sent to the email address in question. Enter in your information following the prompts, including a valid email address (Gmail or otherwise). Photo Courtesy: S3studio/Getty Images To create a Google account, visit Google's account creation page. Soublet said the department will be considering potential changes over the next several months but he did not give a timetable for finalizing the rules."The goal is making sure that we can get this life-saving technology out on the streets," Soublet said. Neither the Google employee in the driver's seat - who must be there under California law to take the wheel in an emergency - nor the 16 people on the bus were injured.The transit agency has concluded based on the footage that the bus driver was not responsible, spokeswoman Stacey Hendler Ross said. When a drop-down menu of large icons appears, click on Drive. The web browser will open Google Drive, where you can upload, access and share your files. Google has said that both the car's software and the person in the driver's seat thought the bus would let the Lexus into the flow of traffic. In this case, we clearly bear some responsibility, because if our car hadn't moved there wouldn't have been a collision," Google wrote of the incident.What does the video show?The footage shows angles from eight onboard cameras.In one clip, passengers gazing out on a sunny afternoon are jolted to attention by a scraping, crunching sound and the impact, which causes several hand straps to sway.In another clip, the Lexus RX450 can be seen bouncing off the side of the bus. Google has blamed other drivers for past collisions during testing, but, in a first, accepted at least partial responsibility for this crash.The Santa Clara Valley Transportation Authority released the video and post-crash photos this week to The Associated Press under a public records request.Though it was a low-speed collision, the impact crumpled the Lexus' front left side, flattened the tire and tore off the radar Google installed to help the SUV perceive its surroundings.The Lexus had to be towed. Photos show a long scratch mark traversing the side of the bus. You're ready to begin using Google Drive and can now sign into your account on most Google sites by selecting the sign-in option in the top-right corner of the screen. The right lane was wide enough to let some cars turn and others go straight, but to avoid driving over the sandbags, the Lexus needed to slide to its left within the lane. If the email wasn't used, a message will pop up informing you of that with a link to create an account. From workplaces to individual households, Google Drive is increasingly being used everywhere you can imagine. Newly released video shows the moment a Google self-driving car learned the hard way not to tussle with a public bus.The collision happened on Valentine's Day, when a Google vehicle struck the side of a public bus in the Silicon Valley city of Mountain View. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET The base plan costs $1.99 a month or $19.99 if you decide to pay annually upfront. Google would not disclose the cost to fix its car.Surprising moveGoogle has said that safety is its guiding principle in developing the cars, and that once mature, the technology promises to reduce collisions and deaths dramatically.The software that controls the cars is programmed to follow all traffic laws and to drive conservatively, the company said.The law-abiding algorithms that rule the SUV's onboard computer make its decision to try and slip in front of the bus surprising.Footage shows there was not much more than a full car length between the bus and the GMC Yukon in front of it.Google said it has tweaked its software to "more deeply understand that buses and other large vehicles are less likely to yield to us than other types of vehicles." This May 13, 2015 file photo shows the front of Google's new self-driving prototype car during a demonstration at the Google campus in Mountain View, Calif. Photo Courtesy: S3studio/Getty Images You can also access Google Drive via Android or iOS smartphone or tablet by downloading the free Google Drive app from Google Play or a similar app store. If you're looking to access your Google Drive account, getting started is quick and simple. The bus and several other cars that drove straight were to the left of the Lexus, in the same lane.When the light turned green, several cars ahead of the bus passed the SUV. Simply log in with your Google account, and you can access all of your files from your mobile device. The Google employee did not try to intervene before the crash."This is a classic example of the negotiation that's a normal part of driving - we're all trying to predict each other's movements. AP Photo/Tony Avelar (Reuters) - Alphabet Inc's Google unit and automakers objected on Wednesday to California proposals to set new, mandatory rules for testing self-driving cars in the state, which industry officials said could hobble their efforts in the home to much of self-driving vehicle testing and development. Automakers and Google raised a litany of concerns about California's proposal at a hearing in Sacramento on Wednesday. The car's radar unit ended up wedged in the crack where two side passenger doors of the bus join, cracking a glass panel.A camera trained on the driver shows him open his mouth in surprise, then gesture as if to say, "Why did you just hit my bus?"Damage to the bus was between $2,000 and $3,000 (roughly Rs. 1,34,210 and Rs. 2,01,300), the transit agency said Wednesday. The proposed requirement that manufacturers generate a year of driverless testing data before applying for an operating permit drew objections from General Motors Co , Volkswagen AG , Honda Motor Co , Ford Motor Co , and Google.The state's approach "could greatly delay the benefits that self-driving vehicles can bring to safety and mobility for individuals," said David Strickland, who heads the Self-Driving Coalition for Safer Streets that includes Google, Ford, Lyft, Uber Technologies Inc and Volvo Car Group.Brian Soublet, deputy director of the California DMV, said Wednesday the department wants concrete suggestions to help improve its proposal. They expressed opposition to the state proposal to require compliance with guidelines that federal regulators issued last month, but made voluntary.They questioned why California would require a new autonomous vehicle data recorder and what data they would be required to test, and they objected to a proposal they said would force a 12-month delay between testing a vehicle and deploying it on public roads.Automakers also questioned whether police should be able to get any self-driving data within 24 hours without seeking a warrant or subpoena.California regulatory policy is important to automakers and technology companies because of its impact on operations in the state, and because the policies enacted in the most populous U.S. state often influence what other states and other countries do. Photo Courtesy: S3studio/Getty Images By becoming a Google One member, you gain access to extra storage — anywhere from a new limit of 100 gigabytes to 2 terabytes as well as additional customer support, the ability to invite up to five other people to gain personal storage on your plan and the ability to sync and back up phones and other devices. Then click Google Docs, Google Sheets, or Google Slides depending on what you need. More expensive plans also come with extra features, such as cash back in the Google Store and more. Photo Courtesy: ullstein bild Dtl/Getty Images To create one of these new files, click on the "New" button on the upper left-hand side of the Google Drive interface. With it, you can save and share text documents, images, videos and more with users of your choosing. Creating a Google Account If you already have a Google account, you can skip this step. What's more, it's easy to set up and access. In December, California had proposed to require licensed drivers and controls in self-driving vehicles.Ron Medford, director of safety for Google's self-driving car project, said California's proposal to require manufacturers to obtain local approval is "unworkable." The rule could prevent manufacturers from testing a vehicle that can travel from one area to another.Advocacy group Consumer Watchdog urged California to prohibit autonomous vehicles without a human driver until federal regulators enact enforceable standards.(Editing by Joseph White) Photo Courtesy: Justin Sullivan/Getty Images Google Drive is a free file storage and sharing service that uses the power of the cloud to keep all of your documents accessible wherever you go. You might have created an account without realizing it if you've signed up for any Google products, such as Docs, Gmail, Youtube, Google Play or other apps and websites. In the upper right-hand corner, click the small square icon made up of nine smaller squares; this is the Google Apps button. Creating and Uploading Files Not only can Google Drive be used to store and retrieve existing files, but it can also be used as a jumping-off place to create new work. California's proposal would allow for the absence of a human driver and a steering wheel in advanced self-driving cars. If you're unsure if you have one, visit the Google Accounts password change page and enter any email address(es) you may have used to create an account. The easiest way to make more space for yourself is simply to delete content that you no longer need, but for a monthly fee, you can expand your overall storage limit. Verify your email address by clicking the link in the confirmation message sent to your email immediately after filling out the form, and add a recovery email address and phone number if desired. You may even have an account already without realizing it. Footage recorded by cameras on the bus shows a Lexus SUV, which Google has outfitted with sensors and cameras that let it drive itself, edging into the path of the bus that was rolling by at about 15 mph.It was the first time in several years of testing on public roads that a Google self-driving car prototype caused a crash. Upgrade to Google One for More Space The free version of Google Drive comes with 15 GB of storage space that is shared both across devices and with Google Photos and Gmail. An independent claims adjustor has not yet determined liability, she said.Here are a few other things to know about the crash and Google's self-driving cars:Is this the first crash for a Google car?No. The February 14 crash is the first in which Google has acknowledged its car made a mistake that led to a collision.Google has reported that between September 2014 and November, its prototypes drove themselves about 400,000 miles on city streets near its Silicon Valley headquarters without causing a collision.Its fleet has likely driven an additional 100,000 miles since then, though the company won't be specific. Google Drive on Computers and Smartphones If you want to access your Google Drive on a computer, open your preferred web browser and navigate to Google's homepage. You can also upload existing Word, Excel or PowerPoint documents into Google Drive, where they'll be converted into the corresponding kinds of docs. According to Google's accounting, its cars have been hit nearly a dozen times on the streets in or around its Mountain View headquarters since road testing began in spring 2014.(Also see: The Big Question About Driverless Cars No One Seems to Have an Answer To)How did the crash happen?The Lexus intended to turn right off a major boulevard but stopped after detecting sandbags around a storm drain near the intersection, according to an accident report Google filed with the California Department of Motor Vehicles.Photos show two small, black sandbags on either side of a drain at the curb.
